Between risk aversion and opportunism there are more options...

In the wake of major reforms of the cross-border taxation rules and with the EU institutions focusing more on the wider impact of tax policies, risk calibration has become more challenging than ever. Thus, making a forward- looking trusted decision and feeling comfortable with the tax risk resilience of the current operating model is becoming increasingly difficult.

In these circumstances, getting relevant advice and practical support from an international tax and transfer pricing expert can bring a great benefit.

Karageorgiou & Associates is a long established business law firm in Greece providing international tax and transfer pricing services with the leadership of Dr. Alexandros Karakitis, a Big4 international tax and transfer pricing partner, who joined our firm in 2015.

Alexandros carries with him a 20 year international tax experience that has been built both in Greece and abroad, where he led, during his previous career, the country tax and transfer pricing practices and advised MNEs on complicated tax effective supply chain restructurings, transfer pricing planning and documentation, multilateral APA as well as tax controversy projects.

At Karageorgiou & Associates, Alexandros leads the tax advisory and controversy practice, delivering to business and individual taxpayers the clarity they need in order to make trusted decisions.
